

Wednesday, October 10

Message From Reclaiming Earth Committee

The subject of climate change is on everyone's mind right now. Wildfires and increased intensity of hurricanes with ever-higher storm surges, typhoons, torrential rains, severe flooding and more frequent and heavier snow in some parts of the world can be and are blamed, according to many scientists, on the changing global climate.

It is a matter of public information that Washington State may become the first in our United States to officially tackle the reduction of carbon and other greenhouse gases with the passage of I-1631. But what is happening elsewhere?

In Barron's, we read: "It's already been a banner week for acknowledging climate change and its resulting dangers: This year's Nobel Prize for economics went to Yale University's William Nordhaus, who pioneered the economic analysis of climate change, and the United Nations issued a dire warning that disastrous ecological disruptions may start in just 12 years in the absence of action to stop it ...

"We urge investors to view the UN report as a call to put their capital to work in ways that benefit both their finances and the environment."

How Investors Can Work Against Climate Change

Barron's

This particular action is known as sustainable responsible investing. Many, if not the majority, of religious communities in the Northwest and elsewhere use this protocol with and for investing.

Not everyone believes in the science or what they are reading or hearing about climate change. There ARE opposite and opposing views about this: how or even IF it is happening, how severe it is or will become and how to combat this catastrophe if and when it arrives.

This makes it even more imperative that you research and form your own opinion. Wouldn't hurt to include a few prayers for openness to the truth of what you are reading and hearing.

May the Spirit of Wisdom accompany you.